2. Basis of the Charge (set forth a clear and concise statement of the facts constituting the alleged unfair labor practices) Local 1181 is engaging in an unlawful secondary strike of the named employers with the sole purpose of attempting to apply pressure to the New York City Department of Education ("DOE") to guarantee job and wage protection for the union's members as part of the new bid for school bus services. For at least the last fifteen years, the union and the bus companies have historically continued to bargain for months after the expiration of the collective bargaining agreement without a work stoppage. The strike now, only two weeks after expiration of the most current collective bargaining agreement, while there are still many open issues on the table to be discussed at the four upcoming negotiation sessions (with more to be scheduled), and in the context of the public statements about the EPP reveals that the strike is aimed solely at trying to force the DOE to retain the EPP in its future transportation contracts. Although the union is attempting to paint the work stoppage as a primary dispute with the employers, for the last several weeks the consistent and repeated public message from the union has been about the DOE's removal of the Employee Protection Provision ("EPP") from the upcoming bids for school bus transportation services. Indeed, the press conference at which the union officially announced the strike was geared exclusively towards the EPP. It should be noted that the struck employers do not have the ability to give the union what they want, i.e. the inclusion of the EPP in all upcoming school bus transportation contracts between the City and yet-to-be-determined contractors. We request that the NLRB seek injunctive relief.
