

The City of New York Department of Investigation

> MARK G. PETERS COMMISSIONER

80 MAIDEN LANE NEW YORK, NY 10038 212-825-5900

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE TUESDAY, MARCH 27, 2018 DIANE STRUZZI

CONTACT:

nyc.gov/doi

NICOLE TURSO

Release #14-2018

DOI STATEMENT ON NYPD'S RESPONSE TO OUR FINDINGS ON NYPD'S SPECIAL VICTIMS DIVISION – ADULT SEX CRIMES

DOI's Report on NYPD's Special Victims Division is evidence based. It relies on the NYPD's own documents, which are attached to the report, as well as interviews with the most senior person in charge of SVD, Chief Osgood, who has been running the unit since 2011. In addition, DOI spoke with other SVD supervisors, senior sex crimes prosecutors in all five District Attorney's offices, numerous recent retirees of SVD and all major victim advocates in New York City. Furthermore, we shared the report with and requested comment from Commissioner O'Neill nearly two weeks ago.

NYPD's statement inaccurately notes two numbers:

- 1: In 2017, the average caseload of an SVD investigator was 77 (not 62). The 77 number is based on NYPD's own documentation. (Homicide detectives average two cases per year).
- 2: The number of detectives assigned to actively investigate adult sex crimes is 67 (not 85) and the NYPD did not dispute that number last Friday when we discussed the report with NYPD officials. (NYPD has a total of 3,000 detectives).

The report does not dispute the survivor-centered model or FETI. In fact, we commend these initiatives in our report.

DOI's report demonstrates this: more needs to be done to properly respond to victims of adult sex crimes. The NYPD's refusal to recognize this presents additional barriers to sex crimes victims in their pursuit of justice.

DOI is one of the oldest law-enforcement agencies in the country and New York City's corruption watchdog. Investigations may involve any agency, officer, elected official or employee of the City, as well as those who do business with or receive benefits from the City. DOI's strategy attacks corruption comprehensively through systemic investigations that lead to high-impact arrests, preventive internal controls and operational reforms that improve the way the City runs.