

Over two years ago, Puerto Rico was devastated by Hurricane María. It was a crippling blow to the island. From the very beginning, Comité Noviembre, (CN), worked quickly and diligently to provide assistance directly to non-profit and business organizations in Puerto Rico at the grassroots level. In September 2017, CN launched the Estoy Con Puerto Rico Hurricane Relief Effort with its consortium of Puerto Rican leaders, organizations, business partners and Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of New York which served as fiscal conduit for this effort. CN is proud that this effort raised over half a million dollars and has provided much needed aid and services directly to over 70 nonprofit organizations and small businesses throughout the island. These organizations deal with issues ranging from health and mental health, education, solar energy, water shed projects, food insecurity, HIV/AIDS, homelessness, suicide prevention and many basic human need services. Grants were also awarded to 44 small businesses and micro enterprises to stimulate the economy. A list of organizations is attached.

Comité Noviembre has conducted 3 humanitarian mission to Puerto Rico.

First Humanitarian Mission to Puerto Rico, December 11th – December 18th, 2017

On CN's first 8-day humanitarian mission to Puerto Rico non-perishable food, water, medical supplies, and cleaning materials were delivered to Aibonito, Barranquitas, Comerio and Naranjito in the mountains to Loiza and Maunabo by the ocean and Arecibo, Manati, Cayey, Caguas and San Juan inland. Because the trip took place during the Christmas season, toys were also distributed to children in each of the towns visited as well as to El Hospital del Niño in Bayamón.

This effort distributed over 4,000 bags of groceries; 200 bags per town to families plus other non-profits, churches and elderly residences we encountered throughout the island on our trip. Enough food to feed an estimated 20,000-25,000 people.

At the end of this mission several things became clear. The situation in Puerto Rico was changing from a relief to a rebuilding effort and the people of Puerto Rico needed the voice of all Americans, federal dollars and assistance in its recovery.

Second Humanitarian Mission to Puerto Rico August 1st – August 9th, 2018

The second humanitarian mission to Puerto Rico took on a new charge and an important call to action. Fifty-two participants of the trip conducted volunteer service throughout the island from planting trees and seeds at Siembra Tres Vidas in Aibonito, removing debris, gardening, painting and power washing walls in Dorado/Vega Alta with Hunger Corp., assembling and delivering 400 backpacks with school supplies and books for their library to La Escuela Jesús Sanabria Cruz in Yabucoa, to distributing greatly needed items to 30 families in Comerio; to cleaning elderly homes and apartments with Ráfaga Solidaria in Orocovis, Naguabo and Aibonito. CN also co-sponsored and volunteered at Feria de Salud: Feriarte: Arte, Salud y Cultura; a health, wellness and mental health fair with a culture and arts twist in the town plaza of Bayamón.

Estoy Con Puerto Rico Grants

During this trip we also visited and presented grants and equipment to non-profit organizations and small businesses from funds raised through the Estoy con Puerto Rico Hurricane Relief effort. The grants range from assisting small businesses and micro enterprises re-open for business, to special programs created to help the community deal with mental health issues arising from the devastation of Hurricane María including depression and suicide prevention programs, to transforming areas of a facility into dormitories for displaced University of Puerto Rico students, assisting the forgotten elderly community and making donations to food pantries. Comité Noviembre selected organizations from proposals received from organizations and businesses and determined the amount of donations in the first two waves of funding distributions by devastation of area, loss of home/property, health issues and for basic human necessities.

As the need in Puerto Rico changed to rebuilding and long-term solutions, the Estoy effort focused on organizations that were creating long term solutions in solar energy, water purification systems and health and mental health issues surfacing from post Hurricane Maria trauma. Additionally, the effort focused on getting businesses back in operation to stimulate the economy. Each of the organizations and businesses funded by the Estoy Con Puerto Rico effort provided proof of non-profit status or business registration certificate, as well as a full written report on what contributions were used for, and the impact it had on the community.

One Person Can Make A Difference...

CN Trip Participant Proposes Solar Project to the Let's Share The Sun Foundation Result: Five Non-Profits in Puerto Rico to Receive Solar Panels

Comité Noviembre is thrilled that it was the catalyst for The Sun Foundation to profile several of the locations visited on our 2nd humanitarian trip to Puerto Rico for possible solar panel installation. Thanks to Austin Behrmann, solar energy assistant at Jordan Energy in Troy, New York who participated in the trip in August 2018. He profiled each location visited for possible solar installation. Austin developed a report on his finding on the most feasible locations for solar installations.

Upon returning from Puerto Rico, this report was presented to the board of the Let's Share the Sun Foundation and they along with Fr. Eric Cruz, Catholic Charities Community Services Bronx Coordinator, decided to move forward with one installation at this time at El Mesón de Amor in Río Piedras.

A group of students from Siena College (Loudonville, NY) traveled to Puerto Rico in February 2019, to begin installation at El Meson. The five organizations selected are: El Meson del Amor, (Rio Piedras); La Hormiga/Hunger Corp, (Dorado); Siembra Tres Vidas, (Aibonito), University of Puerto Rico/Agenda Ciudadana Humacao Campus) and Proyecto de Apoyo Mutuo, (Humacao).

Third Humanitarian Mission to Puerto Rico July 31st – August 8th, 2019

On CN's third humanitarian trip to PR we visited places we had already done volunteer work in the past to continue our long term commitment to these organizations but to also see the progress of these projects and join new volunteer efforts as well.

On our first day we returned to Hunger Corp., a nonprofit organization that is building and restoring 32 homes for victims of Hurricane María in La Hormiga community of Dorado. In August 2018, CN volunteers removed debris, power-washed, plastered, and painted throughout this area. It was truly gratifying to see the homes we worked on last year, completed and move-in-ready for their owners. This year we built the frame for the cement that would form the foundation of a new house.

As the trip continued, we witnessed people from all walks of life - young, old, employed, unemployed - waiting for hours on long lines to receive a bag of groceries and a hot meal. People were sleeping on the streets of some of the most affluent areas of Puerto Rico begging for money for food.

CN trip participants were awed by the Asociación de Mujeres Agroempresarias ("Association of Women Agricultural Entrepreneurs"), an organization created by a group of female farmers whose goal is to encourage the development of agribusinesses for women. They empower women through expert training to fill traditionally-non-female jobs, allowing them to advance the economic development of their families. They establish sustainable agricultural enterprises, and market their products thus contributing to the economic stability of their homes and their community.

We were scheduled to visit Finca Cosechas Tierra Viva, the first "smart" farm in Puerto Rico, producing sustainable greens, herbs, vegetables, and fruits in an acre and a half of land. However, a torrential down pour kept us from visiting the actual farm. But its co-founder and mechanical engineer, Franco Marciano, made an incredible presentation explaining what a "smart" farm is and how it works. He blew us away with his concept: implementing accessible technology towards the production of food which in turn develops a sustainable, productive, efficient and profitable farming model. As he simply stated, “Cosechas Tierra Viva is where ecological practices meet technology”.

Puerto Rico imports 85% of its food, and Hurricane María has shown once more the vulnerability of the island’s food security. With food security being an extremely high priority for Puerto Ricans, trip participants volunteered for Ministerio Buen Samaritano (“Good Samaritan Ministry” or “MARC”), a non-profit organization that provides non-perishable foods and a hot meals to Puerto Rican families in need. MARC reaches a total of 90,000 people monthly. After Hurricanes Irma and Maria, MARC distributed over 12 million pounds of food to 640,000 people, impacting forty-five municipalities on of the island.

Our volunteer experience with MARC was truly life changing for many of the participants. The day before our planned service day with MARC our location changed. The young

Pastor of the church called and said he was receiving accounts that there is great need in the Arecibo area of the island for food and he was going to do a “pop-up” food pantry distribution as well as hot meals for whomever showed up. He confided he had no idea how many people would show up because they had just announced it. Our original plan had been “just” to prepare grocery bags and serve lunch to approximately 500 people.

As our bus driver turned into the Coliseo de Arecibo, the largest sports arena in the area, the line of people waiting went around the coliseum 3 times, 4 people deep. As 38 members of our trip got off the bus the crowd burst into cheers. Within minutes our team was instructed, given assignments and the distribution began. The most powerful part of this experience were the blessings, the hugs, and the tears in the eyes of the people we were serving. The humbleness and genuine gratitude from the people we were serving truly struck everyone. At the end of the day 1000 families received bags of groceries and a hot meal.
