v.

DZHOKHAR TSARNAEV

No. 13-CR-10200-GAO

MOTION TO SUPPRESS STATEMENTS

Defendant, Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, by and through counsel, respectfully moves that this Court suppress all statements that he made to law enforcement agents while he was hospitalized at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center. The agents began interrogating him approximately 20 hours after he arrived at the hospital. They questioned him on and off over a period of 36 hours, despite the fact that he quickly allayed concerns about any continuing threats to public safety, repeatedly requested a lawyer, and begged to rest as he recovered from emergency surgery and underwent continuing treatment for multiple and serious gunshot wounds.

Suppression is required for the following reasons:

- 1) The statements were involuntary, see Mincey v. Arizona, 437 U.S. 385 (1978);
- 2) The so-called “public safety exception” does not permit admission of the statements; and
- 3) The delay in presenting Mr. Tsarnaev to a court, for the purpose of prolonging interrogation without counsel, violated his due process rights.

Facts

In the early morning hours of April 19, 2013, Mr. Tsarnaev was shot and his brother, Tamerlan, was killed during a gun battle in the streets of Watertown. Mr. Tsarnaev fled. He was arrested some 20 hours later, after suffering multiple gunshot wounds when police unleashed a barrage of bullets into the boat where he was hiding, unarmed. Before he surrendered to law enforcement, he also was subjected to a number of “flash-bang” grenades, designed to disorient a suspect.

Mr. Tsarnaev was transported by ambulance to Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center (“BIDMC”) at approximately 9 p.m. on April 19. He was in critical condition, with numerous serious injuries from gunshot wounds to his head, face, throat, jaw, left hand, and both legs.¹ Although oriented upon arrival, Mr. Tsarnaev's mental status suddenly declined and he required intubation to keep him alive during the initial examination of his injuries. After being stabilized, he underwent emergency surgery to address life-threatening wounds. At about 7 a.m. on April 20, he was transferred to the Surgical Intensive Care Unit. He was given narcotic pain medication throughout the following days.

The news media publicized Mr. Tsarnaev's arrest and hospitalization around the world. Many of these news accounts highlighted federal officials' announcement that they intended to interrogate him without first giving him constitutionally-required Miranda warnings. See, e.g., ABC News, “Feds Make Miranda Rights Exception for Marathon Bombing Suspect Dzhokhar Tsarnaev” April 19, 2013, <http://abcnews.go.com/blogs/politics/2013/04/next-for-bombing-suspect-high-value-detainee-interrogation-group/>.

Agents from the FBI “High Value Interrogation Group” began questioning Mr. Tsarnaev at 7:22 p.m. on April 20. See FBI 302 report dated April 21, 2013 (filed under seal as Exhibit 1S), at 6-7; agent notes dated April 20, 2013 (filed under seal as Exhibit 2S). The interrogation continued, with breaks ranging from 30 minutes to 3 hours and 13 minutes, until 7:05 a.m. the next day. Id. The agents resumed interrogation at 5:35 p.m. on April 21, and continued, with breaks of varying lengths, until 9:00 a.m. the following day, April 22, when counsel was appointed to represent Mr. Tsarnaev. FBI 302 Report dated April 22, 2013 (filed under seal as Exhibit 3S), at 8-9; agent notes dated April 21, 2013 (filed under seal as Exhibit 4S). A complaint charging Mr. Tsarnaev with crimes carrying a potential death sentence had been filed the previous evening, under seal. See DE 1, 3. Throughout the time that Mr. Tsarnaev was being questioned, lawyers from the Federal Public Defender's Office repeatedly asked the court to appoint them to represent Mr. Tsarnaev.

Before interrogation began, two lawyers from the Federal Public Defender Office and a private lawyer who had been appointed by the state public defender's office (pursuant to its authority to assign lawyers before charges are filed in homicide cases) attempted to meet with Mr. Tsarnaev at the hospital. They were turned away by FBI agents, who refused to accept a letter to Mr. Tsarnaev notifying him of counsel's availability. See Affidavit of Charles P. McGinty ("McGinty Aff."), attached as Exhibit 1. One of the agents insisted, nonsensically, that Mr. Tsarnaev was not in custody. Id.

Hospital records show that Mr. Tsarnaev suffered gunshot wounds, including one to the head, which likely caused traumatic brain injury. Following emergency surgery, Mr. Tsarnaev was prescribed a multitude of pain medications, including Fentanyl, Propofol and Dilaudid.² The side effects of these medications include confusion, light-headedness, dizziness, difficulty concentrating, fatigue, and sedation. Damage to cranial nerves required that his left eye be sutured shut; his jaw was wired closed; and injuries to his left ear left him unable to hear on that side. Although apparently able to mouth words when asked about his medical condition by hospital staff, he was unable to talk, in part because of a tracheotomy. He was handcuffed to the bed railing and under heavy guard.

A “high powered” gunshot wound had fractured the base of his skull. See transcript of April 22, 2013 testimony of Dr. Stephen Odom, at 4, DE 13. This injury would likely have caused a concussion. Immediately before the initial appearance on April 22, Dr. Odom, who was treating Mr. Tsarnaev, described his condition at that time — approximately 36 hours after the agents began their interrogation and two hours after it ended — as “guarded.” Id. Mr. Tsarnaev had received Dilaudid, a narcotic painkiller, at 10 a.m. on April 22. Id.

The first interrogation began at 7:22 p.m. on April 20 and continued through the night until 7 a.m. on April 21. Exhibit 1S, 2S. Mr. Tsarnaev wrote answers to questions in a notebook because he was unable to speak. These notes reflect his attempt to respond to urgent questions (he assured the agents that no public safety threat remained), as well as his poor functioning and limited cognitive ability. On the first page, he wrote his address in Cambridge incorrectly the first time. See notes (filed under seal as Exhibit 5S). His next note assured the agents that there were no more bombs. On the fourth page, he wrote, “is it me or do you hear some noise,” an indication of how those injuries were interfering with his cognitive processes.³ The notes contain repeated requests to be allowed to rest and for a lawyer.

Interspersed with these pleas are his assurances that no one other than his brother was involved, that there was no danger to anyone else, and that there were no remaining bombs. In all, he wrote the word “lawyer” ten times, sometimes circling it. At one point, he wrote, “I am tired. Leave me alone. I want a [illegible].” His pen or pencil then trails off the page, suggesting that he either fell asleep, lost motor control, or passed out. At least five other times in these pages, he begged the agents to leave him alone and to let him sleep. He also wrote, “I’m hurt,” “I’m exhausted,” and “Can we do this later?” At one point, he wrote, “You said you were gonna let me sleep.” Another note reads, “I need to throw up.”

According to the FBI report regarding the interrogation on April 20-21, Exhibit 1S, Mr. Tsarnaev “asked to speak to a lawyer on multiple occasions” sometime between 8:35 pm and 9:05 pm on April 20. “JAHAR was told that he first needed to answer questions to ensure that the public safety was no longer in danger from other individuals, devices, or otherwise.” Id. The reports omit any mention of Mr. Tsarnaev’s repeated pleas for sleep.

Mr. Tsarnaev also asked the agents several times about his brother, who, by the time of questioning, had been dead for nearly 48 hours. It is apparent that the agents falsely told him that Tamerlan was alive. One of Mr. Tsarnaev’s notes reads: “Is my brother alive I know you said he is are you lying Is he alive? One person can tell you that.” Exhibit 5S. Another asked: “Is he alive, show me the news! Whats today? Where is he?” Id. In his last note,⁴ Mr. Tsarnaev wrote, “can I sleep? Can you not handcuff my right arm? Where is my bro Are you sure.” Id.

Despite Mr. Tsarnaev’s entreaties to be left alone, allowed to rest, and provided with a lawyer, the agents persisted in questioning him throughout the night and into the morning of April 20. The FBI report and notes makes it clear that the interrogation was wide-ranging, covering everything from how and where the bombs were made to his beliefs about Islam and U.S. foreign policy, as well as his sports activities, future career goals, and school history. The interrogation resumed on the afternoon of April 21. See FBI report dated April 22, Exhibit 3S;

⁴ The notes do not contain any indication of when they were written. Apart from the sequence in which they were provided, it is impossible even to determine on what day they were written.

Agent notes, Exhibit 4S. This second round of interrogation covered many of the same topics as the first one, eliciting a detailed description of the brothers' activities during the days after the bombings.

It is hard to ascertain exactly what questions the agents posed, since their reports simply summarize his statements in a continuous narrative format and their notes reflect only a few questions. In keeping with its controversial and much-criticized practice, the FBI chose not to make any audio or video recording of the questioning. Such a recording would have permitted the Court to assess Mr. Tsarnaev's condition and functioning, to hear the actual words he used and the way he used them, and to verify the sequence of events. Instead, the FBI reports reconfigure Mr. Tsarnaev's statements into an unbroken narrative. Mr. Tsarnaev's handwritten notes provide a much clearer picture of the circumstances of the interrogation than the 302 reports do.

At 6:45 p.m. on Sunday evening, April 21, a criminal complaint was filed under seal. DE 3. However, counsel were not appointed until the next morning. It was only at that point that the agents ceased interrogation.

Argument

I. THE STATEMENTS WERE NOT VOLUNTARY AND THEREFORE MUST BE SUPPRESSED.

Any use of an involuntary statement against a defendant is a denial of due process. See Mincey v. Arizona, 437 U.S. 385, 398 (1978). A statement is involuntary if it was not "the product of a rational intellect and a free will." Townsend v. Sain, 372 U.S. 293, 306 (1963) (quoting Blackburn v. Alabama, 361 U.S. 199, 208 (1960)). The government bears the burden of proving that any statements it seeks to introduce were made voluntarily. Lego v. Twomey, 404 U.S. 477, 489 (1972).

In Mincey, the Supreme Court ordered a new trial based on its conclusion that statements made in a hospital bed by an injured suspect, who repeatedly requested a lawyer, should not have been used to impeach him. The Court wrote:

It is hard to imagine a situation less conducive to the exercise of “a rational intellect and a free will” than Mincey’s. He had been seriously wounded just a few hours earlier, and had arrived at the hospital “depressed almost to the point of coma,” according to his attending physician. Although he had received some treatment, his condition at the time of [the] interrogation was still sufficiently serious that he was in the intensive care unit.

Mincey, 437 U.S. at 398.

The facts presented here may be distinguishable in some respects; for example, Mr. Tsarnaev did not complain of “unbearable pain,” as Mincey did, although hospital records reflect that Mr. Tsarnaev’s pain level fluctuated during this period⁵ and increased as medications started to wear off. Of course, Mincey had not been shot in the head or subjected to flash-bang grenades. Like Mincey, Mr. Tsarnaev “was questioned [while] lying on his back on a hospital bed,” connected to tubes and medical equipment. Like Mincey, “[h]e was, in short, ‘at the complete mercy’ of [his interrogators], unable to escape or resist the thrust of [the] interrogation.” Id. at 399 (citation omitted).

Mincey was questioned for four hours, with breaks for medical treatment. Mr. Tsarnaev was questioned during two sessions, lasting a total of more than 27 hours, with breaks. During these breaks, he was receiving medical treatment. The government may argue that Mr. Tsarnaev, unlike the defendant in Mincey, did not give incoherent answers.⁶ That is not necessarily true. Mr. Tsarnaev gave inconsistent responses — for example, in answering questions about when he first learned of the bombing plan — and his written notes are at times illegible or simply trail off. But more to the point, the medication that Mr. Tsarnaev was administered before and during both interrogation sessions — including the opioid painkiller Dilaudid, given intravenously — had disinhibiting and sedative effects and impaired his judgment, increasing his susceptibility to pressure. Cf. Townsend v. Sain, 372 U.S. 293, 307-08 (1963) (confession given after “truth serum” administered to suspect).

⁵ The hospital records reflect “generalized” complaints of pain on April 20 and “significant surgical pain” on April 21 at 3:28 pm. On April 21, he had “incisional pain and generalized discomfort”. On April 22, he rated the pain in his hand as 7 on a scale of 1 to 10, which is considered “severe” and “very intense.” It is defined as pain that “completely dominates your senses, causing you to think unclearly about half the time.” See https://lane.stanford.edu/portals/cvicu/HCP_Neuro_Tab_4/0-10_Pain_Scale.pdf.

Like Mincey, Mr. Tsarnaev “clearly expressed his wish not to be interrogated.” Id. These entreaties — along with his pleas for a lawyer, for a chance to rest, and to be left alone — were ignored by the agents. The Mincey Court’s conclusion is equally applicable here:

[T]he undisputed evidence makes clear that Mincey wanted not to answer Detective Hurst. But Mincey was weakened by pain and shock, isolated from family, friends, and legal counsel, and barely conscious, and his will was simply overborne. Due process of law requires that statements obtained as these cannot be used in any way against a defendant at his trial.

Mincey, 437 U.S. at 402.

In some respects, moreover, the interrogation in Mincey was less coercive than the agents’ relentless interrogation here. In Mincey, the interrogator at least told the suspect, “If you want a lawyer now, I cannot talk to you any longer, however you don’t have to answer any questions if you don’t want to.” Id. at 401. No such assurances were given to Mr. Tsarnaev. Instead, agents made clear by word and deed that they would not allow him to see a lawyer until they had finished questioning him.⁷ He was thus given no choice but to submit to lengthy interrogation. That fact distinguishes this case from others where a defendant who was questioned while recovering from injuries challenged the use of statements against him or her. Cf. United States v. Siddiqui, 699 F.3d 690, 707 (2d Cir. 2012) (agent routinely asked defendant hospitalized in Afghanistan if she wished to speak with them; if she said she did not, the agent remained silently in the room).

United States v. Abdulmutallab, No. 10-20005, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 105462 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 16, 2011), and United States v. Khalil, 214 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 2000), are not to the contrary. In Abdulmutallab, unlike here, “there was no evidence that Defendant was reluctant to answer questions.” Abdulmutallab, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 105462 at *4. Nor did he apparently request a lawyer. The same was true in Khalil, 214 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 2000).

The undisputed fact that the agents expressly told Tsarnaev that he would not get a lawyer until they were done questioning him also renders the statements involuntary. See Haynes v. Washington, 373 U.S. 503 (1963) (pre-Miranda case holding that written statements obtained from suspect by police who rejected his request to contact his wife so she could get him a lawyer until he cooperated and signed a confession rendered his ensuing statements inadmissible). In Haynes, the Court emphasized that “[t]hough the police were in possession of evidence more than adequate to justify his being charged without delay . . . Haynes was not taken before a magistrate and granted a preliminary hearing until he had acceded to demands that he give and sign the written statement.” Id. at 510. Based on those facts, the Court found that Haynes “was alone in the hands of the police, with no one to advise or aid him, and he had ‘no reason not to believe that the police had ample power to carry out their threats . . . to continue, for a much longer period if need be, the incommunicado detention – as in fact was actually done.” Id. at 514. Despite a half-century of precedents since Haynes forbidding the use of such tactics, law enforcement resorted to them here.

Before leaving this issue, a word must be said about the government’s failure to record the interrogation. Presumably, given the fact that the FBI arranged for members of its High Value Intelligence Group to travel to Boston, it could easily have arranged for electronic recording of the questions asked and the answers given. Such recordings would have provided this Court with direct evidence of Mr. Tsarnaev’s condition, his demeanor, and the manner in which the questions were posed. It is clear that government officials — who surely conferred at the highest levels about the scope and timing of the questioning, given the U.S. Attorney’s televised announcement of how it would proceed — made a deliberate decision not to create such a record. Indeed, a 2006 internal FBI memorandum, cited as among the reasons not to tape a defendant’s statement, explains that techniques used by investigators to question suspects “do not always come across in recorded fashion to lay persons as proper means of obtaining information from defendants.” FBI Memorandum dated March 23, 2006, attached as Exhibit 2. The memorandum goes on: “Initial resistance may be interpreted as involuntariness and misleading a defendant as to the quality of the evidence against him may appear to be unfair deceit.” Id.

According to recent disclosures, current FBI policy permits interviews to be recorded with prior approval of the Assistant Special Agent in Charge. See FBI Domestic Investigations and Operations Guide (2011) (“DIOG”) at 18.6.⁸ Given the massive mobilization of FBI personnel and resources, this could have easily been obtained — if the government wished to create a record. The FBI policy is not intended to “indicate that the FBI disfavors recording. Indeed, there are many circumstances in which audio or video recording of an interview may be prudent.” Exhibit 2. If this case did not present such circumstances, it is hard to imagine one that would. The government’s apparently deliberate refusal to create an electronic record should weigh against any claim it now makes that Mr. Tsarnaev’s hospital statements were voluntarily given.

If the statements were not voluntary, they must be excluded. The public safety exception to Miranda, first recognized in New York v. Quarles, 467 U.S. 649 (1984) does not apply to involuntary statements. United States v. DeSantis, 870 F.3d 536, 540 (9th Cir. 1989). Cf. Quarles at 654 (case involved “no claim that respondent’s statements were actually compelled by police conduct which overcame his will to resist”).

II. THE PUBLIC SAFETY EXCEPTION TO MIRANDA DOES NOT PERMIT ADMISSION OF THE STATEMENTS.⁹

In Quarles, the Supreme Court addressed the admissibility of a rape suspect’s response to a police officer’s question, posed before Miranda warnings were given, concerning the location of a missing gun. The suspect, who was wearing an empty holster when arrested, told police highly publicized case, a U.S. Attorney in Arizona was fired after requiring agents in his district to record statements by defendants. See E. Lipton, J. Steinhauer, Battle Over F.B.I. Policy Against Taping of Suspects Comes to Light in Firing Inquiry, THE NEW YORK TIMES, April 2, 2007, available at <http://query.nytimes.com/gst/fullpage.html?res=9C03E5D71E30F931A35757C0A9619C8B63>.

⁹ This issue may be moot, as government counsel informed defense counsel by e-mail on the afternoon of May 7, as this motion was being finalized, “that it does not intend to use Mr. Tsarnaev’s statements at Beth Israel in its case-in-chief at trial or sentencing.” Because, however, the government has not agreed to forego all potential uses of the statement, e.g., in rebuttal, and has explicitly declined to disavow reliance on Quarles, defendant seeks by this motion to preserve all issues regarding the admissibility of the statements.

where to find the weapon. The Supreme Court held that the statement was admissible, where the police, “in the very act of apprehending a suspect, were confronted with the immediate necessity of ascertaining the whereabouts of a gun which they had every reason to believe the suspect had just removed from his empty holster and discarded in the supermarket.” Quarles, 467 U.S. at 657.

The scope of the public safety exception has been debated ever since the Supreme Court first recognized its existence in Quarles. Defense counsel submit that, however broad it may be, applying it to the facts of this case cannot be justified.

A. The Public Safety Exception does not Apply Here.

In Quarles, the Supreme Court upheld the admission of statements made moments after arrest to officers who, “in the very act of apprehending a suspect, were confronted with the immediate necessity” of determining where the suspect had discarded a gun. Quarles, 467 U.S. at 657. As soon as the suspect told them where the gun was, they read him his Miranda rights before asking further questions. Id. at 652.

The prolonged and comprehensive interrogation at issue here is the very opposite of what the Court approved in Quarles. When Mr. Tsarnaev’s interrogation began, more than five days had passed since the bombings and he had been in custody for nearly 24 hours. His brother was dead. Agents had spent nearly 12 hours searching the Tsarnaev family’s Cambridge home. They had also searched and secured all cars known to have been used by the Tsarnaev brothers. Whatever emergent circumstances might have existed earlier in the week had largely, if not completely, dissipated.

The first round of interrogation lasted nearly 12 hours, with breaks. The second round, resumed on the afternoon of April 21, lasted more than 15 hours and ended only when counsel were appointed. Mr. Tsarnaev had assured his interrogators — apparently within the first few minutes — that there were no other bombs, that no one else had been involved in the plot, and that no further danger remained. He provided them with details about how the bombs were built. But still the questioning continued for hours, in what was obviously an effort to extract as much incriminating information as possible, without regard for the protections of the Fifth Amendment.

The FBI agents elicited information about the brothers' activities before and after the bombings, about the murder of Sean Collier, about the carjacking, and about their family relationships and history. These questions went well beyond even the Department of Justice's own written policy regarding use of the public safety exception to interrogate members of terrorist organizations. This policy contemplates limited questioning outside of Miranda about "possible impending or coordinated terrorist attacks; the location, nature and threat posed by weapons that might post (sic) an imminent danger to the public; and the identities, locations, and activities or intentions of accomplices who may be plotting additional imminent attacks." FBI, "Custodial Interrogation for Public Safety and Intelligence-Gathering Purposes of Operations Terrorists Inside the United States," (October 21, 2010), as published in The New York Times on March 25, 2011, attached as Exhibit 3. The memorandum encourages agents to "ask any and all questions that are reasonably prompted by an immediate concern for the safety of the public or the arresting agents without advising the arrest (sic) of his Miranda rights." Id. Here, the agents instead used the opportunity to conduct a thorough debriefing of Mr. Tsarnaev, with no regard for constitutional restrictions.

Some courts have extended the Quarles exception to situations lacking the immediacy presented in Quarles itself. See, e.g., Trice v. United States, 662 A.2d 891 (D.C. App. 1995) (questioning regarding presence of gun in apartment where defendant was arrested four days after shooting). But undersigned counsel is unaware of any case that has applied the public safety exception to an interrogation as prolonged, wide-ranging, and remote in time from the public safety emergency as this one.

The use of the “public safety” exception in terrorism cases was brought into sharp focus by the arrest of the so-called “underwear bomber” on Christmas Day in 2009. In that case, agents questioned the suspect within four hours of his arrival at the hospital. See Abdulmutallab, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 105462 at *3. The agents gave Abdulmutallab Miranda warnings after questioning him for 50 minutes. Id. at *4. The pre-Miranda questions “sought to identify any other attackers or other potentially imminent attacks[.]” Id. at *17. The suspect told the agents that he was not in pain and expressed no reluctance to answer questions. Id. at *4. In that case, the agents knew that Abdulmutallab “claimed to be acting on behalf of al-Qaeda,” id. at *3, a circumstance which made the threat of other attacks far more grave. Cf. Khalil, 214 F.3d at 121 (brief questioning of suspected terrorist at hospital immediately after bombs were discovered and before they were disarmed produced admissible statements). These cases illustrate the narrow scope of the Quarles exception to Miranda and provide no support for the radical expansion of Quarles that would be required to uphold admission of the statements obtained here.

B. The Public Safety Exception does not Permit Admission of Statements Obtained after a Defendant Invokes his Right to Counsel and Seeks to Stop Questioning.

Neither the Supreme Court nor the First Circuit have decided whether Quarles provides a public safety exception to the rules requiring police to cease interrogation when a suspect invokes his right to counsel under Edwards v. Arizona, 451 U.S. 477 (1981) and right to remain silent under Michigan v. Mosley, 423 U.S. 96 (1975). Those cases held that once a suspect asserts his rights to counsel or against self-incrimination, questioning must stop and can only begin again if initiated by the suspect. As the Mosley court put it: “Through the exercise of his option to terminate questioning he can control the time at which questioning occurs, the subjects discussed, and the duration of the interrogation.” Id. at 103.

That is precisely the option that Mr. Tsarnaev sought to exercise, by pleading with the agents to let him rest and to allow him to see a lawyer. The entreaties were ignored.

The Fourth and Ninth Circuits have held that the public safety exception permits police to override a suspect’s request for a lawyer. United States v. Mobley, 40 F.3d 688, 693 (4th Cir. 1990); United States v. DeSantis, 870 F.2d 536 (9th Cir. 1989). We submit that these cases were wrongly decided, and are, in any event, factually distinguishable. First, Mobley recognized that “the reasoning of Quarles is not on all points with the situation in which the accused has claimed his right to counsel[.]” Id. at 692. After all, Quarles permits police to forego a prophylactic warning about a defendant’s right to remain silent; it does not permit police to override those rights once they are asserted.

Second, the Mobley court found that the facts of that case did not support the application of the Quarles exception, stressing that:

the [Quarles] “public safety” exception applies only where there is “an objectively reasonable need to protect the police or the public from any immediate danger associated with [a] weapon.” Id. at 659 n. 8, 104 S.Ct. at 2633 n. 8. Absent such circumstances posing an objective danger to the public or police, the need for the exception is not apparent, and the suspicion that the questioner is on a fishing expedition outweighs the belief that public safety motivated the questioning that all understand is otherwise improper.”

Id. at 693. In Mobley, officers executing a search warrant asked the defendant, after he had invoked his right to counsel and they were preparing to leave his apartment with him in custody, if there were any guns or weapons in the apartment. Id. at 690-91. The Fourth Circuit concluded that his response — informing police of the presence of a gun — was not covered by the public safety exception, where officers had already conducted a sweep of the apartment, determined that no one else was present or resided there, and had arrested the defendant. Id. at 693.

United States v. DeSantis, 870 F.2d 536 (9th Cir. 1989) also concluded that the Quarles exception can be applied to a claimed violation of Edwards. Id. at 541. In that case, officers arresting the defendant on a warrant asked him whether there were any weapons in his bedroom before allowing him to enter the room to get dressed. “The inspectors lawfully were entitled to question DeSantis for the purpose of securing their safety, even after he had asserted his desire to speak with counsel.” Id. No such compelling, immediate threat to safety was present here, where Mr. Tsarnaev was in custody, gravely injured, and heavily guarded. Even assuming arguendo that some limited questioning was permissible, it should have ceased after Mr. Tsarnaev assured the agents that no other bombs existed and there were no accomplices who posed a danger to public safety.

The government may argue that the interrogation that began on the afternoon of April 21 does not suffer from the same flaws as the first one. It is unclear whether Mr. Tsarnaev repeated his request for a lawyer during the second night of interrogation. But neither a failure to do so nor the lapse of time between the morning and afternoon of the April 21 constitute a “break” sufficient to permit renewed questioning despite Mr. Tsarnaev’s earlier request for counsel. See Edwards, 451 U.S. at 484-85 (once defendant asserts right to counsel, police may not further interrogate him unless he initiates further contact with them); Mosley, 423 U.S. at 104 (police must “scrupulously honor” invocation of right to remain silent).

It is undisputed that Mr. Tsarnaev was not provided with Miranda warnings before this second session, either. The argument that these statements fall within the public safety exception is even weaker, since any danger to the public was further diminished by the passage of time and by the information that Mr. Tsarnaev already had provided.

III. THE POSTPONEMENT OF MR. TSARNAEV'S INITIAL APPEARANCE BEFORE A JUDICIAL OFFICER IN ORDER TO PROLONG INTERROGATION REQUIRES SUPPRESSION OF HIS STATEMENTS.

Even before suspects were identified in the Boston Marathon bombing, lawyers with the Federal Public Defender Office notified officials in the U.S. Attorney's office that they were available on a 24-hour basis to represent any suspect taken into custody. While thousands of officers searched for Mr. Tsarnaev in Watertown, this offer was repeated.

Mr. Tsarnaev was arrested on the night of April 19 and rushed to Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, where he arrived in critical condition. During the press conference that immediately followed his capture, government officials announced that agents would not read the suspect his rights and were invoking "the public safety exception." Lawyers from the Federal Public Defender Office contacted prosecutors and court officials in an effort to provide representation. Two of the lawyers went to the hospital in the early morning hours of April 20. McGinty Aff. They were turned away. The agent with whom they spoke refused to accept a letter to him from the lawyers, although she did take a business card, on which a cell phone number was written.

A lawyer assigned by the state public defender agency also went to the hospital on the night of April 19 and again in the afternoon on April 20, in an attempt to see Mr. Tsarnaev. He, too, was turned away and a law enforcement officer refused to accept a letter from him to Mr. Tsarnaev. The lawyer sent two emails to a federal prosecutor, asking to be permitted to see Mr. Tsarnaev and to have Mr. Tsarnaev informed of his availability and of his advice that Mr. Tsarnaev remain silent until he could speak to counsel. The prosecutor did not respond.

Throughout April 20 and 21, the Federal Public Defender and other lawyers from her office contacted court officials, asking to be appointed. Court personnel informed the lawyers that they would be appointed as soon as a complaint was filed. McGinty Aff.

This turned out to be incorrect. A complaint was signed at 6:47 pm on April 21, DE 3, and filed under seal. Interrogation continued through the night and well into the morning of April 22. The government's motion to seal, DE 1, explained that "public disclosure of these materials might jeopardize the ongoing investigation of this case." This baffling assertion ignores the fact, well-known to anyone with access to a television, radio, newspaper, smartphone or computer, that Mr. Tsarnaev was in custody. Nothing in the application for the complaint revealed information that had not already been reported by media around the world. It thus appears that the sole reason to seal the complaint was to allow the interrogation to continue by delaying the defendant's initial appearance before a judicial officer and the appointment of counsel.

Here, as in Haynes v. Washington, "the only fair inference to be drawn under all the circumstances is that" the defendant would not be charged and brought to court "until the police had secured the additional evidence they desired[.]" Haynes, 373 U.S. at 512. In Haynes, decided before Miranda, the Supreme Court held that the confession was involuntary and its use at trial violated the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

Fed. R. Crim. P. 5(a)(1)(A) requires that an arresting officer "must take the defendant without unnecessary delay before a magistrate judge." The Supreme Court has held that even a voluntary confession must be suppressed if this rule is violated. See Mallory v. United States, 354 U.S. 449 (1957) (holding that delay for purpose of interrogation is, by definition, unnecessary delay).

Section 3501 of Title 18 prohibits exclusion of a voluntary confession, based on a delayed presentment, if the statement was made within six hours of arrest. In Corley v. United States, 556 U.S. 303 (2009), the Supreme Court interpreted this statute in light of the McNabb-Mallory line of cases, noting, “In a world without McNabb-Mallory, federal agents would be free to question suspects for extended periods before bringing them out in the open, and we have always known what custodial secrecy leads to.” Id. at 320. As a result, the Supreme Court held, statements made more than six hours after arrest are admissible only if the delay in presentment is shown to be reasonable and necessary.

Here, the delay meets neither requirement. The government cannot contend that presentment was delayed due to the unavailability of the magistrate-judge. On April 21, the magistrate-judge approved five search warrant applications in connection with the investigation of the bombing.

Furthermore, the complaint and arrest warrant issued on the evening of April 21, shortly after the second round of interrogation began. Nevertheless, appointment of counsel and the initial appearance were delayed until the following morning, despite the fact that counsel were ready, willing, and available to immediately represent Mr. Tsarnaev. During that time, agents continued to interrogate him for another 15½ hours.

The 2010 Department of Justice policy regarding interrogation of terrorism suspects who are under arrest but not yet indicted specifically warns, “Presentment of an arrestee may not be delayed simply to continue the interrogation, unless the defendant has timely waived prompt presentment.” DOJ Memo, Exhibit 3. No such waiver occurred here.

Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, this Court should suppress the statements made by Mr. Tsarnaev to FBI agents at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center on April 20 through 22.

Affidavit of Charles P. McGinty

I, hereby state the following under the pains and penalties of perjury:

1. I am the First Assistant Federal Public Defender for the Districts of Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island.

2. After learning of the arrest of Dzhokhar Tsarnaev on April 19, Assistant Federal Public Defender Timothy G. Watkins and I went to Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center (“BIDMC”) to see Mr. Tsarnaev. We arrived shortly after midnight on April 20. We spoke with FBI Special Agent Kristin O’Neill, who told us that 1) Mr. Tsarnaev was not in custody; 2) he had not been given his Miranda warnings, and agents did not intend to do so; and 3) because he had not yet been formally charged, we did not represent him and had no right to meet with him.

4. At about 1 a.m., I sent an email to the U.S. Attorney, First Assistant U.S. Attorney, head of the USAO counter-terrorism, and Assistant U.S. Attorney Alope Chakravarty, as well as Magistrate-Judge Marianne B. Bowler, describing our efforts to meet with Mr. Tsarnaev and to inform him of our availability.

5. On the afternoon of April 20, I spoke twice with Brendan Garvin, the courtroom clerk for Magistrate-Judge Marianne B. Bowler. He told me that our office would be appointed as soon as a complaint was signed.

6. At 3:42 pm on April 20, First Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Pirozzolo sent me an email, copied to Magistrate Judge Bowler and Chief Judge Saris. In it, he stated, "We are currently proceeding in accordance with legal standards applicable in cases, such as this, that implicate public safety and national security concerns."

7. The above is true to the best of my knowledge.

Signed under the pains and penalties of perjury, this 22nd day of April, 2014.

Title: ELECTRONIC RECORDING OF CONFESSIONS AND WITNESS INTERVIEWS

Synopsis: To clarify existing FBI policy on electronic recording of confessions and to provide guidance on some of the factors that the SAC should consider when deciding whether to authorize recording.

Administrative: This document is a privileged FBI attorney communication and may not be disseminated outside the FBI without OGC approval. To read the footnotes in this document, it may be required to download and print the document in WordPerfect.

Details: FBI policy on electronic recording of confessions and witness interviews is contained in SAC Memorandum 22-99, dated 10 August 1999, which revised SAC Memorandum 22-98, dated 24 July 1998. Under the current policy, agents may not electronically record confessions or interviews, openly or surreptitiously, unless authorized by the SAC or his or her designee. See MIOG, Part II, Section 10-10.10(2). Consultation with an AUSA, CDC, or OGC may be appropriate in certain circumstances, but it is not required.¹ In certain circumstances (set forth in the above) guidance),² FBIHQ concurrence is required.

In recent years, there has been on-going debate in the criminal justice community whether to make electronic recording of custodial interrogations mandatory. According to a study published in 2004 by a former U.S. Attorney,³ 238 law enforcement agencies in 37 states and the District of Columbia electronically record some or all custodial interviews of suspects. In four of those jurisdictions, electronic recording is mandated by law - by legislation in Illinois and the District of Columbia and by case law opinions issued by the state supreme courts of Alaska and Minnesota. In addition, it is the practice in some foreign countries--such as Great Britain and Australia--to record all interviews of suspects, and some U.S. Attorneys feel strongly that at least some interviews should be required to be recorded.⁴

There is no federal law that requires federal agents to electronically record custodial interviews and, to our knowledge, no federal law enforcement agency currently mandates this practice. There have been isolated incidents in which federal district court judges, as well as some United States Attorneys, have urged the FBI to revise its current policy to require recording all custodial interviews, or at least those involving selected serious offenses. In addition, agents testifying to statements made by criminal defendants have increasingly faced intense cross-examination concerning this policy in apparent efforts to cast doubt upon the voluntariness of statements in the absence of recordings or the accuracy of the testimony regarding the content of the statement. Furthermore, in some task force cases that result in state prosecution, FBI state or local partners have been precluded from using FBI agent testimony of the defendant's confession because of restrictive state law or policy.

² These circumstances include, among other things, extensive media scrutiny, difficult legal issues, complex operational concerns, or significant involvement by FBIHQ.

³ Thomas P. Sullivan, Police Experiences with Recording Custodial Interrogations, Northwestern University School of Law, Center on Wrongful Convictions, Number 1, Summer 2004.

⁴ There is a group within the Department of Justice, which includes the FBI, DEA, ATF and the Marshals Service, that has met periodically to discuss this issue. It is conceivable that an outgrowth of those discussions will be a pilot program in one or more judicial districts in which recording at least certain interviews will be required.

Re: 66F-HQ-1283488-3, 3/23/2006

Against this backdrop, FBI executive management has reviewed the current policy. After a careful deliberation of all the available options, the Director has opted for now to retain the current policy but has tasked the General Counsel to issue guidance on the factors that the SAC or his or her designee should consider before granting exceptions.

Before listing those factors, a brief review of the sound reasons behind the FBI policy on electronic recording of confessions and interviews is in order. First, the presence of recording equipment may interfere with and undermine the successful rapport-building interviewing technique which the FBI practices.⁵ Second, FBI agents have successfully testified to custodial defendants' statements for generations with only occasional, and rarely successful, challenges. Third, as all experienced investigators and prosecutors know, perfectly lawful and acceptable interviewing techniques do not always come across in recorded fashion to lay persons as proper means of obtaining information from defendants. Initial resistance may be interpreted as involuntariness and misleading a defendant as to the quality of the evidence against him may appear to be unfair deceit. Finally, there are 56 field offices and over 400 resident agencies in the FBI. A requirement to record all custodial interviews throughout the agency would not only involve massive logistic and transcription support but would also create unnecessary obstacles to the admissibility of lawfully obtained statements, which through inadvertence or circumstances beyond control of the interviewing agents, could not be recorded.

Notwithstanding these reasons for not mandating recording, it is recognized that there are many situations in which recording a subject's interview would be prudent. For this reason, it has been FBI policy for nearly eight years to grant an SAC the authority and flexibility to permit recording if he or she deems it advisable.

Often, during the time this policy has been in effect, SAC discretion has been viewed negatively; i.e., as an "exception" to the "no recording" policy, instead of positively; i.e., as a case-by-case opportunity to use this technique where and when it will further the investigation and the subsequent prosecution. Supervisors are encouraged to seek permission to record, and SACs are encouraged to grant it, whenever it is determined that these objectives will be met.

⁵ In theory, surreptitious recording would not affect this approach. However, if recording became routine practice, it would not take long before that practice became well known--especially among members of organized crime.

To: All Field Offices From: Office of the General Counsel
Re: 66F-HQ-1283488-3, 3/23/2006

When deciding whether to exercise this discretion, SACs are encouraged to consider the following factors:

- 1) Whether the purpose of the interview is to gather evidence for prosecution, or intelligence for analysis, or both;
- 2) If prosecution is anticipated, the type and seriousness of the crime, including, in particular, whether the crime has a mental element (such as knowledge or intent to defraud), proof of which would be considerably aided by the defendant's admissions in his own words;
- 3) Whether the defendant's own words and appearance (in video recordings) would help rebut any doubt about the voluntariness of his confession raised by his age, mental state, educational level, or understanding of the English language; or is otherwise expected to be an issue at trial, such as to rebut an insanity defense; or may be of value to behavioral analysts;
- 4) The sufficiency of other available evidence to prove the charge beyond a reasonable doubt;
- 5) The preference of the United States Attorney's Office and the Federal District Court regarding recorded confessions;
- 6) Local laws and practice--particularly in task force investigations where state prosecution is possible;
- 7) Whether interviews with other subjects in the same or related cases have been electronically recorded;
- 8) The potential to use the subject as a cooperating witness and the value of using his own words to elicit his cooperation;
- 9) Practical considerations--such as the expected length of the interview; the availability of recording equipment and transcription (and, if necessary, translation) services; and the time and available resources required to obtain them. If cost factors prove prohibitive, consider whether the requesting U.S. Attorney's Office will agree to pay for the services.

These factors should not be viewed as a checklist and are not intended to limit the SAC's discretion. It is recognized, however, that establishing reasonable standards on the type of cases, crimes, circumstances, and subjects for which recording is a desirable objective so as to maintain internal field office consistency and to inform field agents and supervisors when and why to request recording.

To: All Field Offices From: Office of the General Counsel
Re: 66F-HQ-1283488-3, 3/23/2006

Field office standards are to be encouraged for another very important reason. The absence of any standard by which field office discretion in this matter is exercised will render testifying agents vulnerable to attack on cross-examination. If, on the other hand, an agent can point to identifiable standards that provide a reasonable explanation for why some interviews are recorded and others are not, the implication that the agent chose not to record an interview to mask the involuntary nature of the defendant's admissions will be much harder to argue.⁶ This office is prepared to assist in the preparation of such standards if desired.

Finally, in order to assist agents who testify to unrecorded admissions, an explanation of this policy and the reasons behind it should be added to field office quarterly legal training. Questions may be directed to Assistant General Counsel Jung-Won Choi, at the Office of the General Counsel, Investigative Law Unit, at 202-324-9625.

⁶ Carrying this point further, it would be even easier to withstand cross-examination if a fixed policy as to when to record and when not to record were established at FBI Headquarters that permits no field office or agent discretion. Yet, such an advantage would be far off set by the loss of flexibility that field office SACs and supervisors need to make sound investigative decisions such as the choice of interviewing techniques.

F.B.I. Memorandum

Below is the text of an unsigned, internal F.B.I. memorandum, obtained by The New York Times, that provides guidance to agents about when, in the course of interrogating a terrorism suspect, they should advise the suspect of his so-called Miranda rights to remain silent and have an attorney present during questioning.

U.S. Department of Justice

Federal Bureau of Investigation

October 21, 2010

Custodial Interrogation for Public Safety and Intelligence-Gathering Purposes of Operational

Terrorists Inside the United States [1]

Identifying and apprehending suspected terrorists, interrogating them to obtain intelligence about terrorist activities and impending terrorist attacks, and lawfully detaining them so that they do not pose a continuing threat to our communities are critical to protecting the American people. The Department of Justice and the FBI believe that we can maximize our ability to accomplish these objectives by continuing to adhere to FBI policy regarding the use of Miranda warnings for custodial interrogation of operational terrorists [2] who are arrested inside the United States:

1. If applicable, agents should ask any and all questions that are reasonably prompted by an immediate concern for the safety of the public or the arresting agents without advising the arrestee of his Miranda rights. [3]
2. After all applicable public safety questions have been exhausted, agents should advise the arrestee of his Miranda rights and seek a waiver of those rights before any further interrogation occurs, absent exceptional circumstances described below.

3. There may be exceptional cases in which, although all relevant public safety questions have been asked, agents nonetheless conclude that continued unwarned interrogation is necessary to collect valuable and timely intelligence not related to any immediate threat, and that the government's interest in obtaining this intelligence outweighs the disadvantages of proceeding with unwarned interrogation. [4] In these instances, agents should seek SAC approval to proceed with unwarned interrogation after the public safety questioning is concluded. Whenever feasible, the SAC will consult with FBI-HQ (including OGC) and Department of Justice attorneys before granting approval. Presentment of an arrestee may not be delayed simply to continue the interrogation, unless the defendant has timely waived prompt presentment.

The determination whether particular unwarned questions are justified on public safety grounds must always be made on a case-by-case basis based on all the facts and circumstances. In light of the magnitude and complexity of the threat often posed by terrorist organizations, particularly international terrorist organizations, and the nature of their attacks, the circumstances surrounding an arrest of an operational terrorist may warrant significantly more extensive public safety interrogation without Miranda warnings than would be permissible in an ordinary criminal case. Depending on the facts, such interrogation might include, for example, questions about possible impending or coordinated terrorist attacks; the location, nature, and threat posed by weapons that might post an imminent danger to the public; and the identities, locations, and activities or intentions of accomplices who may be plotting additional imminent attacks.

As noted above, if there is time to consult with FBI-HQ (including OGC) and Department of Justice attorneys regarding the interrogation strategy to be followed prior to reading the defendant his Miranda rights, the field office should endeavor to do so. Nevertheless, the agents on the scene who are interacting with the arrestee are in the best position to assess what questions are necessary to secure their safety and the safety of the public, and how long the post-arrest interview can practically be delayed while interrogation strategy is being discussed.

[1] This guidance applies only to arrestees who have not been indicted and who are not known to be represented by an attorney. For policy on interrogation of indicted defendants, see Legal Handbook for Special Agents (LHBSA) Section 7-3.2 For policy on contact with represented persons, see LHBSA Sections 7-4.1 and 8-3.2.2.

[2] For these purposes, an operational terrorist is an arrestee who is reasonably believed to be either a high-level member of an international terrorist group; or an operative who has personally conducted or attempted to conduct a terrorist operation that involved risk to life; or an individual knowledgeable about operational details of a pending terrorist operation.

[3] The Supreme Court held in New York v. Quarles, 467 U.S. 649 (1984), that if law enforcement officials engage in custodial interrogation of an individual that is "reasonable prompted by a concern for the public safety," any statements the individual provides in the course of such interrogation shall not be inadmissible in any criminal proceeding on the basis that the warnings described in Miranda v. Arizona 384 U.S. 436 (1966), were not provided. The court noted that this exception to the Miranda rule is a narrow one and that "in each case it will be circumscribed by the [public safety] exigency which justifies it." 467 U.S. at 657.

[4] The Supreme Court has strongly suggested that an arrestee's Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination is not violated at the time a statement is taken without Miranda warnings, but instead may be violated only if and when the government introduces an unwarned statement in a criminal proceeding against the defendant. See Chavez v. Martinez, 538 U.S. 760, 769 (2003) (plurality op.); id. at 789 (Kennedy, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part); cf. also id. at 778-79 (Souter, J., concurring in the judgment); see also United States v. Patane, 542 U.S. 630, 641 (2004) (plurality opinion) ("[V]iolations [of the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination] occur, if at all, only upon the admission of unwarned statements into evidence at trial."); United States v. Verdugo-Urquidez, 494 U.S. 259, 264 (1990) ("[A] violation [of the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination] occurs only at trial.")

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Date of entry 04/21/2013

DZHOKHAR TSARNAEV, date of birth July 22, 1993, was interviewed at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, 330 Brookline Avenue, Boston, Massachusetts 02215. Immediately prior to the interview, Julie Dion, RN, informed the interviewing agents an interview of JAHAR would not pose a medical risk to him, she was not aware of any brain injury suffered by JAHAR, and that his only medications were an antibiotic and phenatyl, neither of which, at their current dose, would inhibit his mental faculties. After being informed of the identities of the interviewing agents, JAHAR confirmed he could hear and understand the interviewing agents, could respond to the interviewing agents, and was not experiencing overwhelming pain, and provided the following information:

On the day of the Boston Marathon, JAHAR and his older brother, TAMERLAN, drove from Cambridge to Boston in JAHAR's car around 2:30 p.m. JAHAR and his brother were the only individuals in the vehicle. Both JAHAR and his brother had a backpack containing an explosive device. JAHAR carried a brown backpack while his brother's backpack was black. After parking, they walked approximately five minutes to spots very close to the Marathon finish line. Each of them decided on their own where they would stop near the finish line and place the backpack containing the explosive device. JAHAR could not remember whether he or his brother was closer to the finish line. Just before detonating his device, JAHAR placed a call to his brother with the other device to try to synchronize the two detonations. After JAHAR put his backpack down, he walked away and detonated the device using a button. He used a trigger mechanism built according to the instructions in the Inspire Magazine articles.

JAHAR stated that there were no other attacks planned, there were no unaccounted devices, and the only individuals involved in the attack planning and execution were JAHAR and TAMERLAN.

It was TAMERLAN's idea to conduct the attack. Initially, JAHAR stated he heard about the plan the day of the attack, then indicated that his brother discussed the attack a day or two before the marathon, before finally stating TAMERLAN asked him to join the attack about a week ahead of the marathon.

TAMERLAN's wife had no idea about the attack. She generally works from 7 a.m.-10 p.m., and, as a result, she was not in the house very much. She did not know about the fireworks or anything else related to the attacks. She is an American with an American family and is an innocent woman.

JAHAR and his brother did not look for others to join them after the Monday attack. Since they knew it would take a few days, or less, before they got caught, they told no one about what had happened, in part because they did not think anyone in their right mind would agree to join them. Joining with them at that point they would have been inviting someone to either die or go to jail.

JAHAR stated no one had any knowledge of their plan before the attack, nor did they tell anyone after the attack had occurred. JAHAR and his brother did not include others in their plan before the attack because they could not trust anyone else.

Eventually, JAHAR acknowledged learning about his brother's plan to attack the marathon about a week ahead of time. TAMERLAN directed JAHAR to get a new phone as they would need to coordinate their attack. JAHAR's old phone had recently been deactivated because friends who were a part of his family plan had not been paying their bill.

JAHAR's brother had been careful not build the devices too far ahead of time so that he could keep the attack plan a secret from his wife. JAHAR stated he and his brother built just two devices and used the two devices at the marathon, but he provided different versions as to when the devices were assembled. In one version, they waited to assemble the two devices that Monday morning because it was not hard to assemble. In another version, TAMERLAN constructed the devices on his own.

JAHAR's brother did not talk about any additional devices similar to the two used at the marathon.

When asked about other attacks that JAHAR and his brother were preparing for, JAHAR relayed that he thought he was going to die on Monday, so there were no other attack plans. JAHAR wore his hat backwards without a hoodie because he thought he was going to die. JAHAR and his brother did not plan to die, they just thought it was something that might happen. They did not conduct the attack to glorify themselves but they thought they may die regardless.

JAHAR said that the next incident he and his brother had was the standoff with the police on Thursday. After the Asian individual got away on Thursday night, it became clear to JAHAR that the end was near.

JAHAR and his brother knew there were cameras at the marathon and they knew they were going to get caught, so they decided to act on Thursday. They did not have anything planned; at that point it became improvisation for them.

JAHAR did not warn any of his friends to stay away from the Marathon because he didn't care if they got hurt. JAHAR only reached out to Baudy to see what people thought of the bombings. JAHAR used the iMessage feature of his phone to contact Baudy.

JAHAR's brother traveled home about one year ago to see family but didn't talk much about what he did while he was there. The brother's travel was not for training.

Previous to this trip, JAHAR's brother had not been home for a long time, and, as far as JAHAR knew, the trip was just a visit. After JAHAR's brother left, their father, growing tired of living in the United States, returned home. JAHAR's brother eventually returned to Massachusetts after six months, but a few months later, in September 2012, their mother, also tired of the United States, returned home as well. JAHAR's brother never talked about any people he may have met overseas.

JAHAR stated that he and his brother constructed two explosive devices in his brother's home at 410 Norfolk, Apartment 3, Cambridge, Massachusetts. The devices were easy to build, because instructions were available in a copy of Inspire magazine the two downloaded from the Internet. JAHAR and his brother used powder to build the bombs. The powder came from fireworks purchased about one year ago in New Hampshire. Both JAHAR and his brother traveled to New Hampshire to purchase the fireworks. JAHAR did not know why his brother purchased the fireworks, but indicated that they did not buy many fireworks during their trip to New Hampshire.

Initially, JAHAR stated he and his brother, TAMERLAN, disposed of the two devices they built by throwing them in a river. Later, however, JAHAR explained how he and his brother detonated them on Monday at the Boston Marathon. JAHAR was amused by the reports he and his brother planted four devices on the day of the Marathon when, in fact, the brothers constructed only the two bombs that exploded. No one else participated in the attacks - JAHAR and his brother built the two devices and planned the attack alone.

In addition to the pressure cooker devices, JAHAR and his brother also made mini-bombs to cause more damage to people, mostly police officers who served in the Army. They made the mini-bombs because they did not have any additional pressure cookers to make the larger devices. The mini-bombs had a fuse which would be lit to detonate the device. JAHAR and his brother looked up the instructions on how to make the device on the internet by searching for the word "bomb." JAHAR did not use his computer nor did he use a computer at school to look up the instructions for making the mini-bomb. JAHAR is not clear about whether his brother used his own computer for the research.

JAHAR and his brother did not test the items at any point prior to using them. They used the mini-bombs they made against police. If they had not been caught, they probably would have made more bombs and committed more attacks

After the explosion, JAHAR and his brother returned to the brother's house and stayed there for the evening. JAHAR had the new T-Mobile iPhone with him the whole time. JAHAR initially indicated that he could not remember who he texted from his iPhone after the explosion. JAHAR later indicated that he sent iMessages to his friend, Baudy, who attends Boston University. JAHAR stated that neither he nor his brother told anyone about what they had done.

The text messages between JAHAR and Baudy were casual texts because JAHAR wanted to make it appear like it was a normal day. The messages asked how Baudy was doing, if he was safe, and knew what had happened. Given that the bombings were already on the news by then, Baudy had heard about them. Even though JAHAR's cell service was shut off because he had a family share plan with his college friends but had not paid the bill, JAHAR could still send and receive iMessages when wifi was available.

However, since he needed a cell phone to coordinate the Marathon attacks with his brother, on Sunday (April 14) JAHAR bought a T-Mobile, one-month, pre-paid cell phone plan to accompany his iPhone 5. He used this T-Mobile number to contact his brother to coordinate the bomb detonations. Only his brother had the telephone number and he only used that phone to communicate with his brother.

On Thursday (April 18) JAHAR and his brother were not going to Massachusetts Institute of Technology to plant a device. They were trying to go to New York, though JAHAR does not know why they were planning on New York because it was his brother's idea. The attack on the MIT police officer happened simply because the officer happened to be where JAHAR and his brother were located.

In the car the two of them had a handgun, some food, and a couple of mini-bombs. JAHAR made the mini-bombs with his brother, just as he had made the larger devices with his brother. The mini-bombs were easier to make than the larger devices. The bigger devices took a few days to make while the mini-bombs they had with them were all made on Thursday.

Continuation of FD-302 of 04/21/2013 Interview of DZHOKHAR TSARNAEV, On 04/21/2013 Page 5 of 7

The gun in their possession on Thursday belonged to both of them. JAHAR at first indicated that he was unsure of how they acquired the handgun but later indicated that they found it in a car in a junkyard.

JAHAR indicated that he was hoping to die as a shahid.

When asked about what triggered JAHAR and his brother to act on Monday, JAHAR initially stated he did not want to answer that question. He simply stated "what's done is done." He then asked again, "Are we not at war?" After repeating the question, JAHAR explained he and his brother were inspired by the promise of heaven and that JAHAR also found Anwar al-Aulaqi's teachings to be very persuasive. JAHAR acknowledged that the time had come when he was finally ready to act. He explained that not every Muslim is inspired, but those that are inspired are able to protect the Muslim people and the Muslim religion. Mujahideen are promised the highest levels, and when they die, they die with smiles on their faces.

When pressed again on who instructed or convinced JAHAR and his brother to act, JAHAR indicated it was online speakers like Aulaqi and magazines like Inspire that convinced them. JAHAR's brother was convinced by no one else other than those online articles, and he got the plans for the devices from Inspire. With God's help, JAHAR's brother was able to improve the instructions and designs provided by Inspire. No one else but JAHAR and Allah provided assistance.

JAHAR also repeatedly indicated that the reason he and his brother conducted the attack is because America is at war and is killing innocents in Afghanistan and other countries. The attack was their way of doing their part to protect their people. JAHAR explained that America needed to feel that same pain. Other than because the Marathon had a lot of people, they did not have a particular reason for selecting it as the target. JAHAR indicated that they really did not know what was going to happen after they conducted the attack.

JAHAR's brother intended to carry out the Marathon attacks with or without JAHAR, and he offered JAHAR to follow him on that day. JAHAR very much wanted to follow him.

JAHAR did not know who convinced his brother to act, and suggested only Allah knew the answer to that question. JAHAR indicated that given that his brother was happily married and had a beautiful daughter, his brother would have to have very strong beliefs to give that up.

JAHAR's brother showed JAHAR a couple of issues of Inspire Magazine to give JAHAR a different perspective and to show JAHAR the truth of what was occurring in Afghanistan and Iraq. Inspire Magazine is well known - even America is aware of Inspire.

JAHAR's brother had previously talked about the events taking place in Iraq and Afghanistan, and the discussions would make both JAHAR and his brother angry. They had been having these discussions for a long time - ever since America first invaded. JAHAR is from Chechnya and people are dying there too, just as they are in Iraq, Afghanistan, and Syria.

JAHAR does not know what changed with his brother to cause the Monday of the Marathon to be the day his brother decided to carry out the attack. JAHAR pointed out that his brother was happily married and has a beautiful daughter.

For the past two years, JAHAR has been attending UMass-Dartmouth where he was studying to possibly become a doctor. Eventually, if JAHAR did practice medicine, he wanted to practice in his home country, not the United States. While he lived on the UMass-Dartmouth campus during the school year, he lived in Cambridge during the summers. JAHAR has had a different roommate each year at UMass-Dartmouth.

JAHAR participated in different sports, including wrestling, soccer, and boxing. His favorite part of boxing was beating people up.

JAHAR has a lot of friends at school and elsewhere.

JAHAR repeatedly inquired about that status of his brother. When asked what he remembered about the last time he saw his brother, JAHAR indicated that he did not remember much about that night other than a gun fight with the police. During the gunfight, JAHAR drove at the police. That was the last time he saw him.

During the second session, when being asked about the type of detonator used in the device JAHAR detonated, JAHAR asked to speak to a lawyer on multiple occasions. JAHAR was told that he first needed to answer questions to ensure that the public safety was no longer in danger from other individuals, devices, or otherwise.

Each fully constructed device was contained entirely within the pressure cooker. The devices used in the marathon attack were placed in backpacks solely for concealment, and one did not have to rely on any components in the backpack to detonate the device.

JAHAR purchased the remote control car components in the two pressure cooker devices used at the marathon online about one month before the attack. It took a little bit of time to get used to adjusting the remote control's configuration, and both JAHAR and TAMERLAN tested the ignition system to ensure the Christmas light came on.

The powder came from $200 worth of fireworks JAHAR and TAMERLAN purchased in New Hampshire. They received a two-for-one discount from the store because of the size of their purchase. The fireworks kits they purchased filled the back seat and trunk of JAHAR's car. TAMERLAN made a separate trip to purchase additional fireworks after the first purchase did not yield enough powder. The initial purchase included different types of fireworks while the second purchase was all the same kind.

TAMERLAN purchased the pressure cookers, and bought the other components for the pipe bombs from Home Depot.

JAHAR and TAMERLAN constructed the devices in TAMERLAN's apartment, located at 410 Norfolk Street, Cambridge, Massachusetts. TAMERLAN's wife, Khadima, worked long hours as a type of housekeeper or home aide, a job she obtained from JAHAR and TAMERLAN's mother after she left the U.S. to return home.

Given Khadima's long work hours, JAHAR and TAMERLAN were free to work in the Norfolk Street house without fear of discovery.

Working the powder from the fireworks was very time intensive. For a time, the two of them would crush fireworks nearly everyday, usually at the house, and it took them a couple of weeks to gather enough powder for the devices. JAHAR and TAMERLAN would hide the materials for the devices under JAHAR's bed. When Khadima was at home, the two would work on the fireworks in the van or JAHAR's car. JAHAR and TAMERLAN did not mix the powder from the fireworks with anything else.

Since he had a roommate and little privacy, JAHAR did not construct any explosive devices in his college dorm room. However, he did leave behind one firework that he claimed was just to have some fun with by lighting off at some point.

TAMERLAN did most of the work on the devices while JAHAR was at school.

JAHAR did not see TAMERLAN use any instructions as he constructed the devices. TAMERLAN was able to do it from memory as he is very smart.

Continuation of FD-302 of 04/22/2013 Interview of DZHOKHAR TSARNAEV On 04/22/2013 Page 3 of 9

On Friday (April 12), JAHAR and TAMERLAN conducted site surveys of possible targets, including police stations in Cambridge and Boston. No one helped them identify or select possible locations to attack. Around 3pm or 4pm on Friday afternoon while driving around and exploring possible targets, the brothers learned that the Boston Marathon was scheduled for Monday.

On Saturday (April 13), TAMERLAN came to the decision to target the Boston Marathon.

On Sunday (April 14), JAHAR and TAMERLAN began constructing pipe bombs ("mini-bombs") at 410 Norfolk Street. The brothers filled the pipes with powder and BB's but did not drill the ends for the fuses on that day.

JAHAR worked on one pipe bomb while TAMERLAN made three or four of them. They put all the unfinished pipe bombs in a bag in JAHAR's closet.

The next morning, Monday (April 15), TAMERLAN finished assembling the two pressure cooker devices to be used for the marathon. The process took about two hours. JAHAR watched while TAMERLAN did the actual assembly.

TAMERLAN did not refer to any instructions or web sites while completing the assembly. It was all from memory. After finishing, TAMERLAN placed each device in a backpack.

TAMERLAN drove the two of them in JAHAR's Honda Civic from Cambridge to Boston that Monday afternoon. They transported the backpacks in the trunk of the car. They found street parking in a "permit parking" signed area near the marathon route. As they had done no site survey, they did not have a specific place in mind where they wanted to set off the bombs. As a result, they walked around for about fifteen to twenty minutes before TAMERLAN settled on their final spots. They had to move at least once when a police officer appeared to be interested in them. TAMERLAN did not have a definitive plan to detonate the bombs by the finish line - it just worked out that way.

After detonating his device, JAHAR took the detonator (the modified remote control car controller) with him as he left the scene. He made sure he threw it into a trash can he passed on his way back to his car so no one would be able to find it.

It took about fifteen minutes for JAHAR to get back to the car. He arrived first, and TAMERLAN, who had the car keys, arrived about five minutes later. On the way back to Cambridge, they stopped at a Whole Foods for JAHAR to buy some milk. They were observing the Muslim tradition of fasting on Mondays and Thursdays and needed milk to break the fast. They were almost home when TAMERLAN remembered that he needed a cardboard box to complete the assembly of the third pressure cooker device. JAHAR and TAMERLAN then drove the four minutes to Yayla's to get the cardboard box.

The two then returned home to Norfolk Street and stayed there until they met Manatov for dinner.

At some point on Monday afternoon, TAMERLAN had a conversation with Manatov during which TAMERLAN invited him to dinner. Later that night, JAHAR and TAMERLAN met Manatov for dinner at a halal restaurant in Somerville. The dinner conversation touched on the marathon bombings, and they all agreed that it was a crazy day. Neither JAHAR nor TAMERLAN told or indicated to Manatov that they were involved in the bombing. Manatov had worked driving his taxi that day, but JAHAR did not know where in the Boston area he worked.

JAHAR stayed at the Norfolk Street residence Monday night, but he left for UMass Dartmouth late in the morning on Tuesday (April 16). Prior to leaving the house, he moved the bag with the unfinished pipe bombs from his closet to a better hiding spot under his bed. He told TAMERLAN he moved them before heading to school.

JAHAR stayed at UMass on Tuesday and Wednesday night. He did not attend any classes on those days, but he may have attended one class on Thursday.

JAHAR made many calls and sent many texts during this period, but they were to social contacts only. He was simply checking up on friends or making arrangements to grab lunch or dinner. None of the people he contacted were involved in or aware of what he and TAMERLAN had done. On Thursday night, he contacted some of these same people to give away his laptop and other items in his dorm room as he did not expect to survive.

When JAHAR saw news coverage containing their photographs at around 5pm or 6pm on Thursday (April 18), he knew "it was the end" and decided he wanted to "cause some damage" before they got caught. After seeing the news, JAHAR called to warn TAMERLAN, and he told JAHAR to leave school and come back to Cambridge. JAHAR thought Khadima and the baby were also home at this time. During a subsequent conversation, TAMERLAN told JAHAR to meet him at Yayla's. When JAHAR met up with TAMERLAN at Yayla's an hour or two later, the two came up with a quick plan to gather up the rest of the bombs and drive around. Both JAHAR and TAMERLAN then drove in separate cars to the 410 Norfolk address.

TAMERLAN waited downstairs while JAHAR entered the residence at around 8pm. The television was not on, and Khadima was in the kitchen cooking. The two exchanged a quick greeting, and JAHAR then retrieved a duffel bag loaded with the now-completed pipe bombs from under his bed before returning to his car. JAHAR did not know where or when TAMERLAN finished the pipe bombs.

JAHAR did not know where TAMERLAN kept the third pressure cooker device nor where he kept his handgun. At the time of their meeting at Yayla's, TAMERLAN had already collected the now-completed third pressure cooker device and his handgun. JAHAR did not know where or when TAMERLAN finished the third device. When JAHAR returned to the vehicles with the duffel bag of pipe bombs, TAMERLAN had already transferred the pressure cooker and handgun from his to JAHAR's car. At some point, JAHAR retrieved his BB gun, as well.

After JAHAR came back down from the apartment, TAMERLAN went up to the residence to retrieve the title to his car. He had decided, since he expected to die that night, that he would give away his car to his friend, Viskhan Vakhobov. They planned to drive to Chelsea to drop off TAMERLAN's gray car, but Viskhan told TAMERLAN he could not meet at that time.

After leaving the residence, the two rode around Cambridge without any sort of plan. TAMERLAN drove. JAHAR kept his T-Mobile phone on, but, since, only TAMERLAN had the number, no one called him. TAMERLAN turned his phone off.

They decided that their first priority was to get a gun for JAHAR. As they drove around, they happened to wind up in the same area as a Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) police officer, so they killed him to get his handgun. However, JAHAR was unable to get the handgun from the officer's holster, and when the area started to get crowded, the brothers moved on, driving toward Brighton or Watertown.

After killing the MIT officer, they carjacked a Mercedes SUV and forced the car's Asian driver to ride with them. The Asian individual drove his car while TAMERLAN sat in the back seat. JAHAR followed in his own car. TAMERLAN turned his phone back on so he and JAHAR, who had kept his phone on, could communicate while in separate vehicles. JAHAR did not know if Khadima ever tried to or successfully reached out for TAMERLAN.

The two cars made their way to Watertown, and TAMERLAN decided to leave JAHAR's car parked on Dexter Street. They parked JAHAR's car and moved the bags with the bombs to the Mercedes. JAHAR noted he had a few Chechnyan friends in Watertown (and other places), but none of them were involved.

It was TAMERLAN's decision to go to Dexter Street. They did not stop at any particular location on Dexter Street; they were simply looking for a quiet street on which to leave JAHAR's car.

The three of them drove around for a while longer as JAHAR and TAMERLAN were trying to figure out what to do. They drove the Asian individual to different ATMs to withdraw money out of the his bank account. They had him withdraw around $700 in total. They planned to use the money to pay for gas as an idea developed to drive to New York City to bomb Times Square.

Both JAHAR and TAMERLAN had been to New York City a few times, but neither had spent much time there. They did not contact anyone in New York nor did they plan to meet anyone in New York.

During their wanderings, they returned briefly to JAHAR's car parked on Dexter Street in Watertown to retrieve their favorite Muslim music compact disc. Ultimately, the Asian individual (who "was pretty fast") escaped from the brothers during a stop at a gas station. Once the Asian driver escaped, the brothers abandoned their loose plan to drive to New York.

After JAHAR escaped from police in Watertown, he hid behind a garage underneath some chairs. While he was hiding, he smashed both of his phones to prevent the police from finding his location through his phones. Before sunrise, when he began hearing aircraft above him, JAHAR moved into a covered boat near the garage by which he was hiding. During the day on Friday, JAHAR heard police cars drive by the area where he was hiding, but no one searched the boat.

JAHAR did not know from where TAMERLAN obtained his handgun but thought he bought it a few months ago.

JAHAR loved both of his parents, but he loved his mother more.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Dias Kadyrbayev as his friend from school. He described him as a "dumbass." JAHAR had a conversation with DIAS about religion, how people make bombs, jihad, and the ways of the world. JAHAR stated that the conversation was not related to the attacks he and TAMERLAN conducted because it was meant as a broader discussion of religion.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Saya Murzalina as Dias' mother.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Bayan Kumiskali as Dias' girlfriend.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Azamet Tazhayakov as his friend from school.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Robel Phillipos as his friend from school.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Timor Muglante as Timor from Kazakhstan.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Ibragim Todashev as Ibrahim from Chechnya. Ibrahim moved to Florida about two years ago.

JAHAR recognized unlabeled photographs of Stephen and Steven Silva.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Hawa Umarova.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Magamed Imakaev.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Maret Tsarneava as his aunt.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Israpil Vakhobov, a Chechnyan and long time friend.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Viskhan Vakhobav, Israpil's brother.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Troy Crossby as Troy, a rapper friend living in Chelsea.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Aindi Alvi Tsarni, his cousin who lives in Washington, DC.

JAHAR recognized an unlabeled photograph of Khairullozkhon Manatov, a friend of his and his brother's and a taxi driver who lives in Quincy. JAHAR met Manatov at the Islamic Society of Boston in Cambridge. They met before TAMERLAN went overseas. Manatov is not married, and JAHAR sometimes plays outdoor soccer with him on Sundays in Newton.

JAHAR did not recognize an unlabeled photograph of Ali Khan Datsaev.

TAMERLAN traveled to Russia in 2012 to see extended family and study Islam. His wife and daughter stayed in the US during the trip. Although it was a long time to be apart, JAHAR did not know why TAMERLAN's wife and daughter did not travel with him. During his trip, TAMERLAN traveled to Chechnya, maybe Grozni, Dagestan, Kyrgyzstan, and Kazakhstan. TAMERLAN's Islamic studies on the trip were not through a particular school and took place in Chechnya.

TAMERLAN visited with family while traveling, including with the ex-husband of JAHAR and TAMERLAN's sister. The ex-husband, Ramzan (phonetic), traveled for a time with TAMERLAN during his trip. Ramzan had remained close with TAMERLAN and JAHAR. TAMERLAN would sometimes communicate with Ramzan via Skype but Ramzan never sent money to TAMERLAN and TAMERLAN never sent any money to Ramzan.

RAMZAN was a "cool guy." He lived near JAHAR and TAMERLAN's mother. JAHAR and TAMERLAN's mother was also close to RAMZAN. JAHAR had been planning to travel to Russia this summer to see his mother and other family. He expected to meet up with RAMZAN during his planned trip.

JAHAR did not know who else TAMERLAN traveled or visited with during his trip because they each have their own set of friends. JAHAR's relations with his brother were generally good. TAMERLAN was usually right about things, and JAHAR looked up to him.

TAMERLAN spoke to JAHAR about his trip, telling him that it was a good trip. TAMERLAN told JAHAR that the authorities watch out for terrorists and will kill you if you are a dedicated Muslim.

JAHAR believed TAMERLAN returned from his trip a better Muslim. He encouraged others to do a better job practicing their faith (e.g. praying five times a day, etc.) TAMERLAN also went into greater detail with JAHAR regarding the responsibilities of Muslims to defend their religion. JAHAR emphasized he was the only one with whom TAMERLAN had these types of conversations.

JAHAR has a Twitter account the tweets of which appears under the username @j_tsar. JAHAR recognized a printout of a posting he made in August 2012 regarding the marathon. It did not mean anything as JAHAR had not decided to target the marathon until shortly before the attack.

JAHAR did not recognize the name Barry Maimone, Dillon Mess, or anyone named Zubat.

DEFENSE FOLLOW-UP VOIR DIRE QUESTIONS (SECOND REQUEST)

Defendant, Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, by and through counsel, respectfully submits the following proposed voir dire questions.

Defense counsel further asks that before each juror’s voir dire examination is concluded, the Court afford counsel a reasonable opportunity to submit specific follow-up voir dire requests based on the juror’s initial responses, or to ask brief follow-up questions themselves.

PUBLICITY

1. What stands out in your mind from everything you have heard, read or seen about the Boston Marathon bombing and the events that followed it?¹

[If juror has difficulty responding, prompt with: Do you recall anything]

- a. About how the bombings occurred?
- b. About the people who are supposed to have carried it out?
- c. About any of the bombing victims who died?
- d. About any of the victims who were hurt but survived?
- e. About the MIT police officer who was killed several days later?

¹*Skilling v. United States*, 561 U.S. 358, 371 (2010) (noting that jurors were asked on questionnaire “to report on ‘what st[ood] out in [their] mind[s]’ of ‘all the things [they] ha[d] seen, heard or read about Enron.’”)

- f. About the defendant, Dzhokhar Tsarnaev?
 - g. About any members of Mr. Tsarnaev’s family?
2. Despite what you have heard, read or seen about this case and this defendant, can you presume him to be innocent of all of the charges against him?
 3. If you were the defendant on trial in this case, would you want someone on your jury who thinks about you the way you think about Mr. Tsarnaev?²
 4. Have you heard or read anything about the very recent attacks in Paris? (If yes)
 - a. Has this news given you any additional concerns?
 - b. Do you feel that the Boston Marathon bombing and what happened in Paris on January 7-9 are similar or connected in any way? (If yes) In what way(s)?
 - c. (Depending on the response) Would this affect your ability to sit as a juror in this case—either with respect to deciding whether the defendant is guilty or innocent, or with respect to his punishment if he is convicted.
 5. Do you want to be on this jury? [If juror hesitates or is evasive, follow up with:]
 - a. If I just left it up to you whether you are seated or excused from this jury, which would you choose? Would you rather be on the jury that will decide this case, or would you rather be excused?

SUPPORT FOR DEATH PENALTY — MORGAN

6. The defendant is charged, as you know, with intentionally setting off bombs at the Boston Marathon that resulted in the deaths of three people. If you found the defendant guilty of this crime, would you automatically sentence him to death no matter what the facts are?³
7. [Alternative formulation:] Do you believe that the death penalty is the only appropriate punishment for a person who deliberately uses a weapon of mass destruction to cause the deaths of several victims? Or could there be cases in which, after considering mitigating factors about the crime or the defendant, you

²*Irvin v. Dowd*, 356 US 717, 727 (1961) (“A number [of veniremen] admitted that if they were in the accused’s place in the dock and he in theirs in the jury with their opinions, they would not want him in the jury.”) would favor life imprisonment — rather than the death penalty — for someone guilty of such a crime?

8. [Alternative formulation:] If you were convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant deliberately committed an act of terrorism that killed multiple victims, could you consider imposing a life sentence rather the death penalty in that situation?
9. If you were convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant killed a child by deliberately using a weapon of mass destruction, would you automatically vote for the death penalty without regard to any mitigating circumstances (such as, for example, the defendant’s youth, or his family background and relationships)?

OPPOSITION TO THE DEATH PENALTY — WITHERSPOON

10. Understanding that you do not support the death penalty, could you meaningfully consider both life imprisonment without possibility of release and the death penalty, and not be committed in advance to voting against the death penalty no matter what the evidence might turn out to be?
11. Please understand that I am not asking you whether you would impose the death penalty in this case. Rather, I am asking only this: Could there ever be a case — involving especially horrible murders, for example, or a very dangerous defendant — in which you would be able to fairly consider voting for the death penalty as a member of a jury?
 - a. (If yes): In other words, if I understand you correctly, are you telling me that while you do not support the death penalty and would be very reluctant to impose it, you could still consider both sentences that are provided by law — life imprisonment without release and the death penalty — and choose between them based on the evidence presented in court about the crime and the convicted murderer?

No. 13-CR-10200-GAO

REPLY TO GOVERNMENT’S SURREPLY TO DEFENDANT’S MOTION FOR CHANGE OF VENUE AND REQUEST FOR EVIDENTIARY HEARING

Defendant, Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, by and through counsel, respectfully files this reply and declaration of Professor Neil Vidmar in response to the Government’s Surreply to the Defendant’s Motion for Change of Venue [DE 512].

The Government has launched an unfair and unwarranted attack on the defense venue expert, Professor Edward Bronson, attempting to discredit not only his conclusions but also his methodology and professional competence. In the process, the Government has also attacked the integrity of one of the most experienced and well-respected venue experts in the country. This assault, offered in lieu of any actual evidence in support of its position, has at most created an issue of disputed fact concerning the validity of both the polling results and media analysis, both of which detected pervasive prejudice in the District of Massachusetts. Inasmuch as the government has attempted to raise numerous issues of fact, the defendant submits that the Court can resolve these issues only after conducting an evidentiary hearing concerning the extent and effect of both massive pretrial publicity and the direct impact of the Marathon bombing on the jury-eligible population of the District of Massachusetts. The issues of fact raised by the Government's surreply cannot be resolved in the Government's favor simply on the basis of its own unsupported allegations.

Upon receiving the Government's responsive pleading attacking the work of Dr. Bronson, defense counsel contacted another distinguished national expert in the field of social science and the law, Professor Neil Vidmar of Duke University, and asked him to review and assess Dr. Bronson's work in this case and the Government's challenge to it. Professor Vidmar's declaration is attached as Exhibit A.

Professor Vidmar has been conducting research and testifying as an expert in pretrial publicity cases for more than three decades. As can be seen from a review of his C.V., a copy of which is attached, Professor Vidmar is exceptionally well-qualified in the field of social science research and law. Given his background and interest in the area of pretrial publicity, Professor Vidmar was willing to undertake a preliminary review of Dr. Bronson's work to assess its validity. As reflected in his declaration, Professor Vidmar has in essence concluded that:

- Professor Bronson's assessment of the likely prejudicial effects of the pretrial publicity and the salience of the case within the District of Massachusetts is correct;
- the survey and associated materials are based on sound social science and methodology;

- the differences found between potential venues are sufficient to indicate excessive prejudice in the District of Massachusetts, and support the proposition that venue should be changed;
- the survey results are representative and strongly indicate that the case is far more salient to the residents of Massachusetts than to residents of the other areas surveyed;
- Professor Bronson's media study reveals differences between the media coverage of the areas studied that is extreme enough to indicate that deeper inquiry will likely widen the gap of salience and prejudice among the areas studied, rather than narrow it;
- the Government's attempt to replicate Professor Bronson's method by listing the top 50 articles through use of innocuous search terms is misleading and at variance with standards used in social science research;
- Professor Bronson's top level media study was performed adequately given time constraints, and produced scientifically acceptable results that indicate an extremely high and consistent level of exposure, greatly increasing the salience of the case to the residents of Massachusetts, particularly in comparison with other areas;
- the Government's surreply is ill-informed as to other areas, including its further attacks on both Professor Bronson and his methodology, and,

- the prejudicial effect of massive publicity and the direct and indirect experiences of many members of any jury pool chosen from the Boston area are unlikely to be overcome by voir dire examination of prospective jurors.

Dr. Vidmar's declaration, although necessarily preliminary (given the short amount of time he has had to provide it) constitutes further evidence that the defendant's Motion for Change of Venue should be granted, or alternatively that there should be an evidentiary hearing on the defendant's notion for change of venue.

Conclusion

The defendant requests that the Court grant his Motion for Change of Venue on the basis of the evidence presented in support of his motion, or in the alternative that the Court hold an evidentiary hearing to address and resolve disputed facts and expert conclusions.

Declaration of Neil Vidmar, Ph.D

I, NEIL VIDMAR, declare as follows:

1. I am the Russell M. Robinson II Professor of Law at Duke University School of Law. My qualifications are attached to this Declaration as Appendix A.
2. I have been conducting research and testifying as an expert in pretrial publicity cases for more than three decades. This experience includes not only testimony in the United States but also in Canada, Australia and New Zealand. I have written several books dealing in part with this subject and a number of articles in leading law related academic publications, including a frequently cited article: Vidmar, N. Case Studies of Pre-and Midtrial Prejudice in Criminal and Civil Litigation. 26 Law and Human Behavior, 73 (2002). That article was updated last year: Vidmar, N., Media Impact on Trial by Jury, in Andrew Taslitz, ed., A Criminal Practitioner's Guide to Managing the Media in Client Representation, ABA Press, 2013
3. I have been asked to assess the Declaration and materials submitted by Edward J. Bronson re the Defendant's Motion for a Change of Venue and the Government's response to the Motion, all of which I received only Wednesday, August 27, 2014.
4. Although only receiving these materials on August 27, I have reviewed them and am in a position to offer a preliminary opinion regarding the validity of Professor Bronson's venue study and the government's criticisms of his work and conclusions.

5. In my opinion, based on the documentation provided, Professor Bronson's assessment of the likely prejudicial effects of the pretrial publicity and the salience of the case within the District of Massachusetts is correct.
6. I have reviewed the survey and associated materials, and find that Professor Bronson's opinion is based upon sound social science methodology.
7. If given more time to complete the project, Professor Bronson could have conducted a more robust investigation which would have produced more refined outcomes. However, the differences found here are sufficient to indicate excessive prejudice in the District of Massachusetts and provide adequate support for the proposition that the venue should be changed.
8. Further analysis of the details of the survey are required, but at this time I am confident that the results for each city or area surveyed are representative and strongly indicate that the case is far more salient to the residents of Massachusetts than to residents of the other areas surveyed.
9. In addition, despite the Government's claims, I am unable to detect evidence of bias in Professor Bronson's survey methodology or in his conclusions from the gathered data.
10. I have also reviewed Professor Bronson's media study and find that it reasonably supports his opinion concerning the existence of a presumption of prejudice in the District of Massachusetts, where the salience of the case is particularly great.
11. While the media study was limited by time constraints, Professor Bronson's investigation reveals differences between the media coverage of the areas studied that is extreme enough to indicate that that deeper inquiry will likely widen the gap of salience and prejudice among the areas studied, not narrow it.
12. The Government's attempt to discredit Professor Bronson's methodology appears to reflect a misunderstanding of basic research methodology. Of course basic search terms were used to identify relevant articles. However, it is inappropriate to assume, as the government apparently does, that whatever emerged from a basic search was automatically considered relevant. Obviously, articles were identified and reviewed, at least in a cursory fashion, before being included in the study.
13. The Government's attempt to "replicate" Professor Bronson's method by listing the top 50 articles produced using innocuous search terms is both misleading and at variance with standards used in social science research.

14. The next stage of a full media analysis, not performed due to time constraints, would normally have involved specific coding and quantitative analysis of detailed article contents. However, this next step appears unnecessary here because the sheer volume of articles produced by just one major Massachusetts paper renders it practically superfluous – it is clear that Massachusetts residents had far more exposure to details, opinions, and updates on this case than either Manhattan or DC.
15. In my opinion, the top-level media study was performed adequately given time constraints, and produced scientifically acceptable results that indicate an extremely high and consistent level of exposure. This level of exposure greatly increased the salience of the case to the residents of Massachusetts, particularly in comparison with other areas.
16. The Government's Surreply to the Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue is ill-informed. To respond to it line by line would require more time than is available to me, but in short there are a number of critical inaccuracies that should be addressed:
 - a. Attacks on methodology. In addition to the issues addressed above, the Government's discussion of Professor Bronson's work contains serious errors. These include the assertion that the method of media analysis "captures all sorts of articles that are barely related to this case at all," and the listing of random results as if these were representative of the articles considered in the media study. Further, the Government's attempt to discredit the survey by labeling one survey question as a "baseline" (which it is not) appears to reflect lack of awareness of the standards of social science research. Again, a full response to the Government's methodological attacks can be produced and supported with more time than is available for this declaration.
 - b. Professor Bronson's prior high-profile cases. Assuming that these cases were attacked in response to Professor Bronson's comparisons with this case, the attempt to paint them as proof that change of venue is always unnecessary is misleading. There are significant details omitted in each that contradict the arguments contained in the Government's surreply. In addition, extrapolating from Professor Bronson's qualified comparisons to suggest that he was equating all factors of the cases is also misleading. All were complicated cases involving significant media exposure and salience in the community, but the similarities end there. I will be happy to delineate these differences, if needed.

c. Personal attacks on Professor Bronson's character. The Government also attempts to discredit Professor Bronson through what appear to me to be unwarranted and inaccurate personal attacks. In my more than four decades of working in closely related fields, and on occasion working opposite Professor Bronson, I have observed him to display great professionalism, acuity, and capability as a researcher and consultant. He has earned the respect of colleagues and judicial officers throughout the country and abroad. Several of the purported quotes about Professor Bronson's personal views were apparently collected from unreliable sources, as they were both inaccurate and out of context.

17. It is my overall opinion that the conclusions stated by Professor Bronson and the methods he used to reach those conclusions are sound and appropriate for the case at hand.
18. Finally, I need to address another issue that is likely to arise in this controversy about a change of venue, namely whether an extended voir dire might be a sufficient remedy for the public prejudice that appears to be extant in the greater Boston area. Would allowing a detailed voir dire be sufficient to offset the problem of many potential jurors being biased?
19. Let me first draw attention to the fact that change of venue exists primarily because experience dating far back in American common law led to the conclusion that sometimes voir dire is an insufficient remedy for pre-trial and trial prejudice in a particular venue. Without reviewing the whole history of the issues, I draw attention to the fact that preliminary analyses of pretrial publicity by Professor Bronson strongly suggest that the Tsarnaev case is roughly similar to the Oklahoma City Bombing trial, U.S. v. McVeigh, 918 F. Supp. 1467 (1996); U.S. v. McVeigh, 955 F. Supp. 1281 (1997). In that case Judge Maitch concluded that the whole state of Oklahoma was so tainted that the trial should be moved to another location, namely Denver. These and other cases which are discussed in my articles cited in Paragraph 2, supra. The problem here, as it was in Oklahoma is not just the media coverage but the personal experience of many potential jurors and other people in their social networks, see generally Vidmar (2013), supra, paragraph 2.
20. As further support to my opinion about the occasional ineffectiveness of voir dire I draw this Court's attention to an important article by Judge Gregory Mize in the District of Columbia Superior Court involved post-voir dire interviews with jurors, who remained silent when the judge asked questions directed to the panel. A number of the jurors who had not responded to the questions were subsequently questioned informally and disclosed information suggesting they did have biases bearing on their impartiality. See GREGORY E. MIZE, On Better Jury Selection: Spotting

UFO Jurors Before They Enter the Jury Room, CT. REV., Spring 1999, pp. 10-15. Individual, sequestered voir dire may correct some of the deficiencies in the situation Judge Mize studied, but for reasons stated above in my professional opinion the massive publicity and the direct and indirect experiences of many members of any jury pool chosen from the Boston area are unlikely to be overcome by voir dire.

21. As time permits, I am prepared to further develop my analyses regarding these and other significant matters regarding the change of venue issue in the Tsarnaev case.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed this 29th day of August, 2014 at Durham, North Carolina.

AREAS OF SPECIALIZATION

My early research was on conflict and group decision-making. Since about 1970, my scholarly efforts have been directed primarily at the interface of social science and law. I conducted a three-year field study of dispute resolution in a small claims court, undertook a number of in-depth field studies of grievance and dispute behavior, and conducted a study of the Ontario Business Practice Act. For almost two decades I have been studying medical malpractice litigation and continue with that subject. I was co-principal investigator of the Arizona Jury Project that taped and analyzed the actual deliberations of 50 civil juries. Additionally, I have conducted research on procedural justice and the social psychological dynamics of justice behavior. A special interest is the social psychology of retribution. Other projects have involved experts, the empirical behavior of the tort system and research bearing on the accuracy of eyewitness identification. I am starting research on legal malpractice.

My scholarly interests also extend to criminal law. I have published articles pertaining to the death penalty and on jury behavior in criminal cases and have drafted amicus briefs on criminal matters before the U.S. Supreme Court and elsewhere. I have conducted research and published articles in leading journals on the topic of pre- and mid-trial prejudice in the United States, Canada, England, New Zealand and Australia. I have also edited World Jury Systems (2000), a book that involves a comparative study of the jury systems of Australia, Canada, England, Ireland, New Zealand, Russia, Scotland, Spain, the United States and other countries.
